A DIRECTORY OF VIRGINIA'S STATE, CITY AND COUNTY OFFICIALS

It's not how much you can leave them that worries us.
It's how much they can hold on to.

When your assets become your family's inheritance, who's going to advise them about taxes? And court fees?
Who's going to steer them away from get-rich-quick schemes and guide them to sound, profitable investments?
It's in your hands to provide them with the protection of professional guidance.
Let one of our Trust Officers explain how.

"A Quality of Life"

NOW that summer will probably bring quiet to the Nixon-college student front. it seems an appropriate time to try to get behind the news stories of immediate events and pseudo-events. In the concentration on making news of events, all media of communication tend to oversimplify, ignoring the multiplicity of causes which underlay the incidents and lumping the participants in the incidents into inclusive categories. For example, in the days when instant civil rights programs in the Southern states occupied the attention of young activists, the problems which met the missionaries in darkest Alabama and Mississippi were invariably reported as "The South." In those days "Southern-racist" became one word: i.e., every Southerner was by definition a racist without any shadings whatsoever. So, currently all demonstrating college students fall into a single category, which implies a unity of motivation. All college students, whether demonstrating or not, are no more alike in their motivations than any other segment of the American public.

Those most active in closing classes and making protest demonstrations would fall into at least three major classifications. At one extreme are the outright anarchists, very similar to the students who one hundred years ago in Russia were called "nihilists"—even to the beards and bombings and plottings to overthrow the System. At the other extreme are the unmotivated going along for the ride, those who would gleefully seize upon any excuse—whether cause or fad—to avoid attending classes and preparing required studies. Those in the middle are, within their individual limitations, genuinely concerned about "the quality of life" in America. They look at the adult world which they are to enter, and their minds and their spirits protest against the quality of life waiting for them.

About these concerned middle, President Nixon was right in saying that if withdrawal from the war in Southeast Asia was not their cause they would find another cause, or issue. When, two years ago in May, the first violent rioting took place at Columbia, with the occupation of buildings, the main cause was the projected building of a new gymnasium which encroached (the rioters claimed) into a colored neighborhood. Later Mark Rudd, the leader of the rioters, wrote an article in which he explained that the real purpose of the riot was to overthrow the establishment through first overthrowing its universities. This past May, Columbia students joined those of more than 200 other colleges in "striking" classrooms as a protest, presumably, against the expansion of the war into Cambodia and/or the killing of four students at Kent State by the National Guard. Next May—it is always in the spring when students get bored and restless—another cause will arouse some other form of protest.

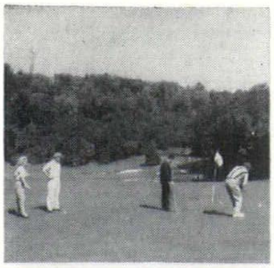

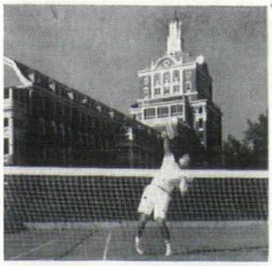

But these various causes must all be regarded as symptoms of a single malady, and the fact that the student eruptions are aroused by a variety of causes should not blind the observer to the existence of the underlying protest against the society itself. For this fundamental protest, few of the students can find a single cause through which they can express their frustration and that hostility which is the other face of fear. On this point, Time Magazine published a revealing letter by a 19-year-old student in a California college. (Continued on page 130)

HEALTH CARE IS A VITAL PROFESSION

And at American Health Services, Inc., health care is the major ingredient in our existence . . . and our growth.

And we are growing . . . building more hospitals . . . more psychiatric centers . . . more rehabilitation centers.

Building them for investors. And building them for AHS.

AHS has facilities in seven Virginia cities. We have plans for centers in eight other Virginia communities . . . and other Atlantic Coast and Southeastern cities.

Health care is vital. And American Health Services, Inc. cares for health . . . It is our middle name, our single profession.

It's about your company.

Answer what you can.
We'll send a man to help you with the rest.

1. Is necessary data being transmitted as fast as it could be? Is it costing more than it should?________

2. Has the company's telephone and communications system kept pace with added personnel or added customers? Are you sure?

3. How much is it costing your company to call regular customers and suppliers in other areas every day? Could it be lessened?

4. Is there a faster way of handling communications with branch offices?________

5. Is there a better way of keeping track of Long Distance billing?

These are just a few of the problems a C&P communications consultant is equipped to solve for you. He specializes in business communications—the fast, efficient, economical kind. A lot of companies have an annual communications checkup. Shouldn't yours? It costs you nothing. And all it takes is a call to your C&P business office.

GAMMAPAR FLOORING . . . .

By The American Novawood Corporation

Blasezuelke Building
Wauwatosa, Wisconsin

GAMMAPAR ISLANDS . . . Beautiful, solid areas in a sea of carpeting. This latest innovation in the field of office flooring allows your visitors the resiliency of carpeting under foot, while at the same time allowing you to move your chair freely.

GAMMAPAR is beautiful hardwood flooring impregnated throughout with plastic through the medium of atomic cobalt radiation. Its beauty, durability and ease of maintenance make it the ideal flooring material for those heavy wear areas under desks and chairs.

GAMMAPAR is durable enough to completely withstand the abuse from chair casters and shuffling feet and smooth enough to allow the chair casters to roll freely. And it is practically maintenance-free—only needs an occasional buffing with a dry nylon scrubbing pad.

In Red Oak, GAMMAPAR is available in Natural and 7 decorator colors. Also available in beautiful natural Walnut.

TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Centennial Week Set for West Point

• The town of West Point will celebrate its centennial birthday late this summer with an outdoor evening spectacle planned for five of the eight days that will climax the festival August 28-September 4.

The town, a crossroads of Virginia history from earliest days, has already taken on a 19th century atmosphere as a variety of beard styles is seen on town streets. Ladies are joining in the activities by searching attics and trunks for authentic dress of the Victorian era.

Authentic costumes and modern-day copies will be seen throughout the summer and will be the appropriate attire for the Centennial Week. Groups known as Centennial Belles are being formed to promote costumed participation in the celebration.

(Please turn the page)

All types of historic items and objects dating back to the late 19th century are being sought for inclusion in the museum or for display in town store windows which are to be dressed up in a fashion appropriate to the Centennial Week atmosphere.

The celebration is to begin informally on Friday, August 28 with formal opening by state and local officials slated for the following day.

Each day of Centennial Week will be crowded with events honoring ladies, farmers, merchants. educators, clergymen, industrialists and young people. Among the events being planned will be water sports, games, dances, an art exhibition, costume competition, antique car show, home tours, horse events, and "the biggest and most spectacular parade West Point has ever seen".

The outdoor spectacle, "Point of Destiny", will be presented begining the evening of Monday, August 31 and will continue through Friday, September 4. More than two hundred people, among them Indians of the nearby Pamunkey and Mattaponi Reservations, will appear nightly in costume in this professionally directed pageant.

"A Quality of Life"

Miss Linda Eldredge asks: " 'The System'—does it work? To some extent, yes. But not enough, not quickly enough. What are we supposed to do with our lives? How are we to go about solving the complex problems of the world? 'Work with the System,' we hear. 'You're young and strong, and besides, the problems aren't really as bad as you think . . .' There comes a time when pure frustration builds and breaks out and is ugly. You throw a bottle and it feels good. If you can't change it, blow it up. It becomes a very personal and illogical thing."

Now, this young student here is actually describing infantile behavior. The infant has no tolerance for frustration. If it does not get what it wants, it screams and throws things. Today we have a college generation that has no tolerance for frustration. All sorts of experts in all sorts of fields have offered reasons — mainly variations on the themes of parental permissiveness and abundance in the society—but there is no reversing the course which has produced a generation of students which vents its frustrations by screaming obscenities and throwing rocks.

These tantrums began on the university grounds and were directed at the authorities who controlled the protected environments where young men and women lived free of want, free of work and free of the necessity of making decisions which involved anyone except themselves. In this protected environment, the students of this generation were typical of all generations of students in holding the conviction that they knew more than their elders, that they knew how to right the wrongs of the world. There is, however, one fundamental dissimilarity between this generation and its predecessors: formerly individual students were convinced that their lives were going to be different from the empty, drudgery-ridden, duty bound, conventionally circumscribed lives of the adults whom they regarded as products of the System; the individuals in this generation do not believe that they can escape the dreary fate of the adults whom they see claimed by the System. This is at the heart of their frustration.

While the various outbursts were restricted to random campuses, most adults — including especially those in governmental positions of authority at all levels—paid no attention to the tantrums of a few college students. Then, after President Nixon announced the spread of military action into Cambodia, which was followed almost immediately by the unfortunate incident at Kent State, the widespread protests of the students, shutting down classrooms in 227 colleges and climaxed with the gathering in Washington, became big national news and forced the Administration to pay attention.

It is true that the war in Southeast Asia presents to this college generation the threat of military service, with its dangers of death or maiming. The students do have a personal hatred of the spread, or continuance, of a war which might involve them. But this is not what they say. They personalize the System in Nixon and vent all their frustrations in the "very personal and illogical thing" (to quote Miss Eldredge) of screaming obscene vituperations at him. No matter how sincere they are in the loathing of a war that might involve them and how deeply troubled by other aspects of the System, this behavior is still similar to the infantile tantrum over frustration. However, when the scope and intensity of the protests, along with the publicity, brought a belated official recognition, the President spoke of the students and to them as though they were responsible adults offering valid dissent on his conduct of the war in Southeast Asia.

Whatever the rightness or wrongness of Nixon's course in Southeast Asia—and events, not opinions, will prove him either right or wrong—the emotional protests of immature young people does not constitute valid dissent. Their closing of classrooms does not effect anything or anyone, except those nonprotesting students whose primary concern is for their education, and their delusion of what might be accomplished by striking classes is a manifestation of their immaturity. It is also a manifestation of their infantile self-importance (the infant feeling that he is the center of the universe), as is their vituperation of Nixon a manifestation of youth's typical inhumanity.

Yet, with all this, the tantrums of the students do have a basic cause, and the point of wisdom for adults is to discover that cause—just as good parents try to discover why an infant is screaming. As mentioned earlier, among responsible protesters this cause is a vague, inchoate protest of the quality of life produced by the System. But to both responsible students and observers this cause is obscured and confused by the clamor raised by the anarchists over a variety of grievances—such as the trial of the "Chicago Seven" (instant heroes), the injustice of New Haven courts to Black Panthers, the failure of colleges to provide Black Studies, and the refusal of certain colleges to drop legal prosecution of lawbreaking students. Indeed, the list of grievances is so extensive that the college newspaper of one state-supported Virginia institution reported students asking support to strike to express dissatisfaction, among other things, at "the continued suppression of the people of the United States."

This last complaint is so lunatic that it would seem enough in itself to remind sympathetic adults that the stated grievances of the students bear little relation to their underlying sense of protest, and to treat seriously each new cause would be similar to treating each symptom of a disease. Of course, there is medically "symptomatic treatment" of such ailments as those which can be cured only by time. Needless to say, the students' basic ailment will only be exacerbated by time. In fact, the present failure of the quality of life was feared by some social observers a long time ago.

In 1931, James Truslow Adams wrote that if the American dream was to become a reality, "those on top, financially, intellectually, or otherwise, have got to devote themselves to the 'Great Society,' and those who are below in the scale have got to rise, not merely economically, but culturally. We cannot become a great democracy by giving ourselves up as individuals to selfishness, physical comfort, and cheap amusements. The very foundation of the American dream of a better and richer life for all is that all, in varying degrees, shall be capable of wanting to share it.

"If we fail," he wrote, the alternative is "the failure of all that the American dream has held of hope and promise for mankind." What the responsible students are comprehending, without articulating it, is the failure of the dream to realize, in their time, a desirable quality of life.

Unless the young men and women in college do articulate their fundamental protest, and take responsible action over a period of years to bring about basic changes in the quality of American life, there is no possibility that governing authorities at any level will do anything to make the American scene more palatable to those preparing to enter the adult world. Politicians respond only to organized group pressure from voters and to the pressure brought, or blandishments offered, by special interests.

At VCU, as at a few other colleges, some students have realized the facts of political life. Realizing that demonstrations and striking classrooms accomplish nothing (except, incidentally, to arouse antagonism to students among some taxpayers and editorialists), a group at VCU has organized to play the System's own political game: they'll ring doorbells and distribute leaflets designed to present the students' case. A VCU spokesman was reported in a Richmond newspaper as saying, "We're going to operate within the System, operate as politicians do . . . try to turn the protest energy out into the community where the real power lies."

This realistic approach is the first step in breaking the pattern of the immature behavior of indulging in disruptions of the academic life in their protected environments, which are, after all, isolated from "the community where the real power lies." And, with all sympathy for the basic grievance of the responsible students, tantrums really are unbecoming in persons passing themselves off as sufficiently adult to guide the president of the United States in international policies.

However, for the realistic approach of responsible students to make any progress toward the fundamental goal of changing the quality of life in America, the students must define their goal, their objective. They must not be diverted into every passing "cause" and led like sheep by the anarchists who are enjoying the time of their lives with the transient power of spreading destruction.

Finally, to be convincing, they need constructive ideas (however vaporously idealistic) to supplant the symbols of unintelligent petulance—such as the clenched fist of the Black Panther, the banners of the Viet Cong, and the repetitious hurling of coarse epithets at fellow human beings who, whatever their limitations, are carrying a burden of responsibility for the whole nation. In brief, if the students are serious about influencing the community, they must assume some maturity and at least give the appearance of being responsible citizens.
